

We use cookies to ensure that we give you the best experience on our website. If you continue to use this site we will assume that you are happy with it. Ok

OTHER NEWS LA CULTURA

Rare Eduardo Chillida exhibition hits New York City

By Joe Duggan (Reporter) - PUBLISHED - 17 Nov, 2015 @ 12:40 LAST UPDATED: 17 Nov, 2015 @ 08:49

SHARE f Facebook Twitter g+ p f Like 3 Tweet 7

ONE of Spain's most revered sculptors is having his work showcased in New York City.

Eduardo Chillida's massive metal monuments include the dramatic Combs of the Wind, which is embedded into rocks in his native San Sebastian.

A Madison Avenue pop-up gallery is hosting until December the first US collection of Chillida's work in 26 years, with rarely seen examples of his work lent by his estate.

London dealer Pilar Ordovas revealed it took a month to ship Chillida's sculptures to New York as some of them weigh up to 21 tonnes.

The Basque sculptor died in 2002.

Actualizar ubicación

Ver ofertas locales

Be the first of your friends to like this

Advertisement

BRITISH AIRWAYS

London (LGW) - Madrid (MAD)

From £230
18 Dec, One way

Book Now

Pricing based on availability and subject to change. Availability may be extremely limited.

LATEST NEWS FROM THE OLIVE PRESS

