Savile Row gets new gallery

Almine Rech Gallery has opened at 11 Savile Row.

Founded by French gallerist Almine Rech-Picasso, the gallery opened in Paris in 1997 followed by a second gallery in Brussels in 2007. It represents leading contemporary artists including Philip-Lorca Dicorcia, Jeff Koons, Gavin Turk, Ugo Rondinone, James Turrell and Hedi Slimane.

The new space was inaugurated last month by Pittura Oggetto, a group exhibition by prominent Italian artists during the Sixties and Seventies, which is on until July 26.

La Perla's new London flagship boutique at 9 Old Bond Street opens this month. Designed by Italian architect Roberto Baciocchi, the store is the second in the UK to open with the brand's chic new interior concept. Alongside lingerie, silks and swimwear, the store will offer a made-to-measure service and a concept menswear line.
